

47th Shodhyatra

Paramakudi to Rameshwaram, Tamil Nadu

Date: 21st to 27th May, 2022

Walking to learn and respect resourceful knowledge

In order to reach out to the creative people at the grassroots and connect with them, a learning walk is organised by SRISTI (Society for Research and Initiatives for Sustainable Technologies and Institutions, a voluntary organisation located in Ahmedabad, India). Twice a year, Shodhyatras take place in rural areas in different geographical locations of the country, with support from the Honey Bee Network. The aim of this Shodhyatra is to felicitate local grassroots innovators, traditional knowledge holders, students with innovative ideas and people who have contributed towards conservation of biodiversity, etc., at their door steps, in front of their community members so that inspiration may be drawn by others. The marching group of Shodhyatris consists of scientists, innovators, villagers, students and professors who walk about 120 kilometres over a period of six to eight days, to convey the message of the Network. Biodiversity and idea competitions are organised among children, while food formulation contests are organised among women in some of the villages (particularly with a focus on food formulations in which at least one less known or forgotten plant produce has been used).

The Shodhyatra is a journey in search of knowledge, creativity and innovations at the grassroots. It is an attempt to reach out to the remotest part of the country with a firm belief that hardship and the challenges of natural surroundings are the prime motivators of creativity and innovation. The Shodhyatra aims at unearthing such traditional knowledge and grassroots innovations that have not only simplified the lives of men, women and farm labourers but have also significantly contributed towards the conservation of biodiversity. It is a journey of mutual sharing of knowledge.

The following activities are undertaken during the Shodhyatra:

1. Felicitation of local innovators and traditional knowledge holders.
2. Organising traditional food formulation
3. Biodiversity competitions to promote local biodiversity conservation and generate awareness about the same.
4. Knowing and understanding local issues and problems of villagers by conducting village meetings.
5. Sharing open source information available with SRISTI which may be of use to the local people.
6. Identification of centenarians, enterprising women and children, artisans, rural researchers and people contributing to the preservation of natural resources.
7. Preparing registers of local knowledge and local plant diversities.
8. Generating awareness about preservation of local species and local biodiversity.
9. Promoting low cost and sustainable agricultural technologies.

All payments made during the yatra should be made in cash. SRISTI will not arrange any to and fro tickets from the yatri's home to the destination.

7. Points to note

- Participants should be physically fit and mentally prepared to walk (18-20) km daily (100km approx. in total) visiting villages in mainly flat terrain. Those who face health issues may please avoid joining the Yatra this time. In the event of meetings which take longer than expected or if there is a need to move onto a night halt, the yatra may continue late into the night. An early morning start to the yatra may also be possible, which will be informed the evening before.
- As the luggage of the shodhyatris will be carried on a tractor trolley or a similar vehicle, it is recommended for each to carry one bag only during the days' walks. No porter facility will be available and hence each shodhyatri will have to load (in the morning before the yatra) and unload (at the night halt place in the evening) his luggage every day. No person will be allowed to travel on the accompanying vehicle except in an emergency or upon requirement. If there are any doubts about your physical fitness, we advise you not to join the Shodhyatra.
- It is expected of the shodhyatris not to walk with their friends or people known to them. This yatra gives an opportunity for all to interact and mingle with unknown people from different walks of life. Therefore, one should make proper use of this opportunity. It will be a pleasure to walk with new friends, to talk to them and to learn with/from them and share ideas. Please do not come with friends in a picnic mood.
- All shodhyatris are expected not to pollute the environment by throwing away empty wrappers of wafers, chocolates, disposable cups, plates, water bottles, leftover food, etc., on the path, in villages, forests or elsewhere and are advised against such consumption during the yatra to avoid setting any precedent on consumption behaviour in the remote places we visit. Similarly, the places where we have our lunch and places where we stay overnight should be left clean.

- The shodhyatris should try to walk together [maintaining social distance] as a single group especially during evenings to avoid any problem, like missing the route, mischief by unknown people, etc. All shodhyatris should note down mobile/telephone number of the Shodhyatra coordinators and local volunteers for use in case of an emergency.
- It is mandatory for the shodhyatris to take prior permission from local people or farmers before plucking any flowers, branches, roots, fruits, barks, etc., from anywhere. Some places may be sacred and any such activity at such sacred groves is strictly prohibited. Also, rare species of the plants are precious to sustain local biodiversity, so things must not be plucked or removed for either study or collection or out of curiosity.
- During the yatra, all participants are expected to carry some literature for dissemination (to be given by SRISTI) in their bags for distribution to the villagers.
- All shodhyatris are expected to follow the instructions and guidelines of the organizers or any other specifics given by the local volunteers. Anyone found guilty of not maintaining the decorum and violating the rules will be sent back immediately.
- The whole yatra is a voluntary effort on a large scale. All shodhyatris are expected to consider this and avoid treating the yatra as an organised tour / trek. While SRISTI and its coordinators will take the larger responsibility of local coordination, all the shodhyatris are expected to actively participate and contribute to the idea of the yatra. Shodhyatris will be allocated different responsibilities and will have to actively ensure that they are delivering on their responsibilities.

8. Consumption of tobacco, cigarette, alcohol/local toddy and any such item is strictly prohibited.

9. Tackling an emergency

The entire route has been planned and arrangements made. However, in case of any natural calamity or any other emergency, last minute changes may be required in the route or any planned activity. All the shodhyatris are expected to follow the advice of the Shodhyatra coordinators in such a situation.

Much of the route falls under local movements, so all the shodhyatris are expected to walk as a group and refrain from making any ideological, political statements, or discuss sensitive issues of caste and religion, etc., within the group or outside. Our aim is to understand the life and culture of the people, explore the local biodiversity, discover and appreciate local creativity and mostly this should be the topic of discussion. SRISTI takes utmost care in assuring safety of the Shodhyatris in the Shodhyatra. However, SRISTI shall not be responsible or liable for any delays and unforeseen incidents in the Shodhyatra arising out of or caused by, directly or indirectly, forces beyond its control, including, accidents, acts of war or terrorism, civil or military disturbances, natural catastrophes or acts of God, and interruptions.
